Everybody's Talking!

Pleasant surprise: Folks at the Salvation Army, an organization that helps the poor in the United States, were thrilled when their annual Red Kettle campaign netted more than just cash. In Shawnee, Kansas, a three-quarter carat diamond was thrown into the kettle, while in Miami, Florida, a diamond and sapphire ring turned up, along with a note that said: "They need it more than I." Both pieces were appraised at approximately $2,000. In Kansas, Major Michele Heaver reported that workers thought the diamond was a piece of trash, but were quite excited when they discovered the value of the piece. Both donations were appraised and auctioned off, with the proceeds helping families in need.

Making an escape: There were 135 penguins at Tokyo Sea Life Park in Japan. That is until one penguin decided to make a run for it and allegedly scaled a net twice its size. It was last seen taking a dip in the nearby Old Edogawa River. The one-year old Humboldt penguin still hasn't been captured, reports Takashi Sugino, an official at the park. The bird is only about 27 inches tall and the net surrounding the enclosure is 6.5 feet. Sugino believes the penguin may have slipped under the net, rather than over it.

Solidarity: Philippe Aumond and Camille Boivin didn't want their son, Jacob, to feel alone in wearing an insulin pump, so they had the image of a pump tattooed on their abdomens. The Canadian couple from La Sarre, Quebec explained that it's their way of being linked forever to their son. Jacob used to think the pump was like having a robot hooked up to him, but once he got a little older, the novelty wore off and he told his parents he felt different from his friends because he wore the pump. That's when they decided to get tattoos. They feel that every child should be able to fit in, no matter what the circumstances.

Painful surprise: Priscilla Dang is a martial arts expert, so when two teenage thugs in Vancouver, Washington tried to assault her while she was out jogging, she quickly went into defense mode. Dang, who has studied kung fu for 18 years at her family's martial arts school, began by grabbing one of the youths and demanding an apology. She actually received an apology, but when the second youth became verbally abusive, Dang got physical. Witnesses to the confrontation called the police, who arrived soon. "They messed with the wrong girl," says Dang.

Did You Know...

Heavy sleep: The rapid eye movement (REM) stage of sleep is where people have their most bizarre dreams. Some believe these dreams have important meanings, while others say they are simply a meaningless by-product of consciousness.

Make it smell: Natural gas, which is used to heat many homes, is odorless. However, since a gas leak can be dangerous, a noxious scent is added to it so people can be alerted if there is a leak.

Bowl of beans: Want to cut back on eating so much meat? Try beans, including black, kidney or navy beans. High in fiber, half a cup of beans also provides about the same amount of protein as one ounce of meat.

Vitamin C: Those concerned about getting enough vitamin C should try eating kiwifruit which can provide twice as much of this vitamin than oranges. One kiwifruit a day is enough to meet the recommended daily requirement of vitamin C.

Need air: The sperm whale can dive to depths of 10,000 feet under the sea, and it can stay under water for well over an hour. Before taking the plunge, the whale stays on the surface for 10 minutes to fill up on oxygen.

On the Lighter Side

Broken pencils are really pointless.

What kind of beans never grow in a garden? Jelly beans.

The school secretary answered the phone in the office. "I'm sorry," said a deep voice, "but Eddie can't come to school today because he's not feeling well." The secretary asked who was speaking. "My father," said the voice on the other end.

Jack: "My cat is so smart, he has his own computer."
Jill: "Does he use it much?"
Jack: "Yes. He's always playing with the mouse."

Automation gave us eighty-three million additional hours of leisure time--and digital dialing took it away!

One toe to another toe: "Don't look now, but there's a couple of heels following us!"
