Everybody's Talking!

Gender specific: Maria Auxiliadora is the name of a barrio of the city of Cochabamba, Bolivia. In this little community, about 400 families live in harmony, and very little domestic violence occurs. That's because Maria Auxiliadora is alcohol-free and is run by women. Almost two decades ago, the five women founders decided to make rules to ensure the safety of their gender in a society that tended to be patriarchal. They decided that the land in the community would be owned by all, so poor families could have stability. Domestic violence is discussed in workshops so everyone understands that it is not acceptable.

Castle home: The old saying, "A man's home is his castle," is true for women, too. Dot Smith, along with her husband Neil, are almost finished building what can only be described as a castle in North Otago, near Oamaru on New Zealand's South Island. This castle home has been under construction for four years, after 30 years of planning. It has a moat, turrets, and medieval wooden doors, and its limestone walls are pallets for various designs, such as lizards, dragons, and crowns. The castle has two stories with a floor space of 1,150 square meters (12,378 sq. ft.). The Smiths plan to add a drawbridge and dungeons. They hope the structure will become their legacy.

Fire truck auction: An orphanage for boys in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, was the recipient of money raised from the sale of a fire truck. Tim and Ingrid Carter, who owned the truck, gave permission for a church in Virginia (US) to auction it off. Hogar de Niños Senderos de Amor (Paths of Love Children's Home) needed a lot of work, so parishioners in the church were more than willing to help. The money raised through telephone bidding was used to install running water in the facility.

Feisty survivor: Ruby Stein, mother of five, grandmother of nine, and great grandmother of eight, had a close call in the mountains near Gypsum, Colorado (US). Stein was driving home from her granddaughter's place (a 245-mile trip) when she took a wrong turn and ended up on a mud and ice-covered, dirt mountain road. For five days, all she had for company was her cat Nikki. She survived on a few small snacks stashed in the car. Finally, a couple of hikers found Stein and Nikki, and got them back to safety. Happily, the feisty lady and her pet were reunited with their family.

Big butterfly: Butterflies come in many sizes, but some species are surprisingly large. For instance, Queen Alexandra's birdwing butterfly has a wingspan of about one foot. An endangered species, it is found in Papua New Guinea.

Agile creatures: The European Alps are home to the Alpine ibex, a kind of mountain goat. These animals are so agile that almost immediately after birth, they can prance confidently on ledges and rocks without taking a tumble.

Confucius says: Lots of people quote Confucius, but who was he? This man was a Chinese philosopher who lived from about 551 to 479 BCE. He was respected for his ideas on many topics, such as ethics, morals, and human behavior.

Gold rush: People of the Inca civilization of South America did not use gold as currency. Rather, they admired its beauty and used it for ceremonial decorations and other objects. They also buried a bit of gold with their dead.

Early visitors: The Viking people arrived in North America long before Christopher Columbus. Archaeologists have discovered abandoned remains of Viking settlements in Newfoundland, Canada, that date back to at least 500 years before Columbus set foot on the continent.

On the Lighter Side

How can you identify a dogwood tree? By its bark.

Patient: "I think corn is growing out of my ears."

Doctor: "How did that happen?"

Patient: "I don't know. I planted radishes."

He has a concrete mind...permanently set and all mixed up.

What's more clever than speaking in several languages? Keeping your mouth shut in one.

Advice: something that's more blessed to give than to receive.
