Everybody's Talking!

Major manicure: A man whose fingernails on his left hand had a total length of 909.6 cm (358.1 inches) finally had a manicure. Shridhar Chillal of Prune, India, is the Guinness World Record holder for the longest fingernails ever; his thumbnail was the longest at 197.6 cm (77.9 inches). He recently cut his nails after letting them grow for an astounding 66 years. He said it was a difficult decision to get the manicure, but once he learned they would be on display at Ripley's Believe It or Not! Museum in New York City, he decided it was time to get the job done. He knows they will be well looked after there.

Marketing backfire: A marketing idea backfired when the offer to "pay your age" for a teddy bear created chaos in shopping centers across England. For one day only, a toy company said the price of their teddy bears would be the equivalent of the buyer's age, which meant parents stormed the stores—with their children in tow—to get the lowest possible price. Huge lines quickly formed, and the wait to get inside stores stretched to as long as nine hours. The company said the overwhelming response forced them to cancel the campaign in most of their stores due to safety concerns.

Natural art: Want a tattoo that depicts the beauty of nature? If so, visitors to Sydney (Australia), might want to stop in at the studio of tattoo artist Sophia Baughan. Her designs have become so popular that clients come from around the world for her to work her magic, with their skin as the canvas. Baughan uses muted tones to create images of birds, flowers, fawns, foxes, and more. Coming from an artistic family, this artist came by her talent naturally, and she has always had a love of animals and flowers. She is grateful that her clients allow her to spend the time it takes to create pieces of art on their bodies.

Helping hand: A mother who simply wanted to help her visually impaired daughter succeed in her education was granted an honorary law degree herself. Eve Havva Kul assisted her daughter Berru Merve Kul, who was studying law at the University of Sakarya in Adapazari, Sakarya Province (Turkey), by accompanying her to class each day. Over the course of four years of study, the student's mother would read the lecture notes and law books to her daughter. When Berru was ready to graduate, her mother accompanied her to the ceremony where, to her surprise, she received the honorary degree in recognition of her devotion to her daughter.

Did You Know...

High flying: The Andean condor is a very large raptor that lives in South America. They can fly as high as 5,500 meters (18,000 feet). Their nests are in rocky outcrops in the mountains.

Sappy plant: An unusual plant lives in the forests of the Philippines, Borneo, Sumatra, and other south Pacific areas. The tropical pitcher plant looks like a long pouch and contains sap. Insects get trapped inside. Even lizards and other small animals can occasionally be victims.

Fossilized remains: There are several different types of fossils. Some are bones and teeth that have turned to stone, or are "petrified." Some are outlines in stone of plants and insects that were once alive. Still others are animals that became trapped in ice, amber, and other substances.

Great lake: Lake Superior, which straddles the border between Canada and the United States, is also named Gichigami. In the Ojibwe language, this means "great water" or "great lake."

Smelly fruit: The durian is an edible fruit grown in Asia. It has a spiky outer husk and soft flesh, but it emits a potent odor. Some folks love the smell, while others detest it so much that they can't bring themselves to eat the fruit.

On the Lighter Side

Wouldn't it be nice if you could call Information and ask them where you left your keys?

A parent asked her kids what they were going to do in school that day.

One said, "We're having a quiz on the moon."
The other asked, "Are you going to let her go?"

Consider the turtle. It can't go anywhere unless it sticks its neck out.

Laughter is the best medicine. It has no unpleasant side effects.

Be suspicious of any doctor whose office plants are in need of attention.
