Everybody's Talking!

Big climb: Climbing Africa's highest peak, Mount Kilimanjaro, is daunting for anyone, but for Spencer West, it was especially challenging. West, who hails from Toronto, Canada is a double-leg amputee. Climbing to the top of the mountain, which is 19,680 ft. above sea level, sent a strong message: believe in yourself and believe in others. West explains that he completed most of the climb on his hands, hoisting himself up the mountain and putting tremendous strain on his shoulders and arms. His climb raised money for Free the Children, a Canadian charity which, among other philanthropic pursuits, provides drinking water to Kenyans.

Rotten lunch: A young Scottish school girl was told by the local town council to stop posting photos and critiques of her poor-quality school lunches on her blog. However, Martha Payne has turned this negative into a positive. The town has reversed its decision and Payne is now working with the Argyll and Bute Council to provide more nutritious meals. The blog and the censorship controversy went viral and people started sending the youngster money. She has raised more than $120,000 (US), which Payne is giving to a charity that helps feed children in Africa. Martha's dad, Dave, insists that his daughter is unfazed by the attention.

Not smart: A teacher at a school in Vaxjo, Sweden is probably wishing he hadn't bet his students' money to pass his exam. The teacher told his students he'd pay them $14.85 if they passed the exam, but they'd have to pay him $29.75 if they failed. Michael Fardigh, a Vaxjo municipality education official, called the teacher's action "highly inappropriate behavior." The teacher was suspended and faces possible dismissal. How did the students do on this exam? Of the four who accepted his challenge, one passed, one failed, one didn't show up because of illness, and another never turned in the exam.

Unusual visitor: In Airdrie, Alberta, Canada most visitors to the city are of the two-legged variety, so folks were surprised and worried for the safety of a 450-pound yearling moose that wandered in. The distressed animal ran through highway traffic and ended up in the parking lot of an auto parts store. Employees managed to corral the beast by closing a fence gate. According to Tom Biglin, a District Fish and Wildlife officer from the nearby city of Calgary, the biggest worry was the possibility that the moose would be struck by a vehicle. Moose are big animals and can cause serious damage to both themselves and a vehicle. The animal was tranquilized and then transported to the wild where it was released.

Did You Know...

Camera competitors: Japanese-made Canon cameras are very popular among consumers. A competing brand is Nikon, made by another Japanese company, which also manufactures other optic devices such as binoculars and microscopes.

Irish terms: The Irish use some interesting words. A banshee, for example, refers to a feminine spirit that wails to warn of an impending death. And most people know that a leprechaun is a mischievous elf.

Low-cal pop: The first diet soft drink – a ginger ale called the "No-Cal Beverage" – was introduced in 1952 by Kirsch. The first diet cola came out in 1959.

Bed in a car: John Lennon of The Beatles once owned a brand new Rolls Royce Phantom V, which he bought in 1965. It had a radiotelephone and a portable fridge, and the back seat could fold into a double bed.

Penned name: William Shakespeare, who died in 1616 at age 52, wrote many works during his lifetime. Today, there are only six known specimens of the famous playwright's signature, all on documents that are in the care of institutions.

On the Lighter Side

To belittle is to be little.

I run, but I never walk. I have a mouth, but I never talk. I have a bed, but I never lie. What am I? A river.

Teacher: "When crossing the Delaware River, why did George Washington stand up in the boat?"
Johnny: "He was afraid that if he sat down, someone would give him an oar to row."

We all often have the feeling that time is running out. The only person who got everything done by Friday was Robinson Crusoe.

A father was reading his son the story of Lot in the Bible. He explained that Lot was told to take his wife and flee from the city, but his wife looked back and turned into a pillar of salt. The little boy looked aghast. "What happened to the flea?" he asked.
