Everybody's Talking!

Scratch and win: Glenda Blackwell of Leicester, North Carolina (US), never believed in spending money on lottery tickets. She always thought it was wasteful because the odds of winning are so remote. That is until recently. Glenda won big, and it was by accident. Her husband wanted her to bring home two tickets for a minor lottery but, to prove a point, she spent $10 to buy a Carolina Millions scratch-off ticket. She figured they'd scratch and lose, and then he would agree to stop buying tickets. However, the ticket made the couple $1 million richer! No word on whether the pair will count their blessings or continue to scratch and, maybe, win again.

Smelling good: Thieves who broke into a business in the town of Hawkesbury, Ontario (Canada), must have had wanted to get cleaned up. With their loot, they will be able to do just that. They stole thousands of bars of soap worth about $17,000 (CAD). The heist took place on a Saturday, but wasn't discovered for a few days. The business is located in an industrial area of town, so the thieves probably had lots of time to load up the soap. Police asked the public for help in finding clues.

Carved beings: A park in the village of Savvateevka, in the Irkutsk region of Russia, is home to some amazing sculptures. Called Lukomorye, the wooden sculpture park attracts master carvers who create characters from fairy tales and mythology, and make animals and insects, too. Carved centipedes crawl on violins and nymphs perch on giant beetles. Winged horses appear ready to fly, while horsemen prepare for battle. An international contest got the carvers working, but now the site is a tourist attraction that also is reviving a tradition of woodcarving in Russia.

Chips for charity: Good snacks are very valuable. At least that is what executives at St. Erik's Brewery in Sweden believe. They went so far as to hire a chef to create a special potato chip that would compliment the beverages they manufacture. The result was not just any potato chip. These snacks were made from special ingredients, such as matsutake mushrooms and truffle seaweed. The company only produced 100 packages of five chips. Each package sold for $74, which is almost $15 per chip! They quickly sold out. The company gave the proceeds to charity.

Did You Know...

Good for you: Caribbean and Pacific Islanders can get protein, carbohydrates, vitamins, and minerals from breadfruits, which grow on trees and are the size of grapefruits. Boiled, steamed, mashed, or fried, breadfruits often are prepared with salt, pepper, and spices.

Small country: On the coast of the Gulf of Guinea, the Togolese Republic (Togo) is among the smallest countries in Africa. It is bordered by Benin, Ghana, and Burkino Faso, and is one of the leading producers of phosphates. Many individuals who were enslaved in the Americas were abducted from Togo.

Famous freedom fighter: The world renowned anti-apartheid revolutionary Nelson Mandela was South Africa's president from 1994 to 1999. His name at birth was Rolihlahla, meaning "troublemaker." He and then-president F.W. de Klerk shared the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993.

Behind the wheel: The first Ferris wheel was constructed for the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago, Illinois (US), in 1893. Modern Ferris wheel feats include the solar-powered Pacific Wheel in Santa Monica, California (US), and the London Eye in England, which hosts millions of visitors per year.

On the Lighter Side

What can you hold without ever touching it? A conversation.

Parent: "Why don't you put fresh water in the fish tank?'
Child: "The fish haven't finished the old water yet."

If you're not embarrassing your teenagers, you're obviously not enjoying yourself.

Boy: "I'm going to New York City to study trumpet."
Girl: "Where did you get the money?"
Boy: "The neighbors chipped in."

How do you make a bandstand? Take away their chairs.
