Everybody's Talking!

Papered in bills: The best place to see a whole bunch of American dollar bills is in a little pub called the Salty Dog Saloon on Homer Spit near the town of Homer, Alaska (US). The interior of this well-known spot is covered in dollar bills and they hang from the ceiling, as well. It all started decades ago when a patron dropped in for a drink. He stuck a dollar bill on the wall so his friend could take it to pay for a drink when he arrived later. Today, people write comments on their bills before tacking them to the wall. The Salty Dog was built in 1897 as a homestead cabin and other extensions have been added to it over the years.

Arm art: Keith Anderson is not going to be one of those parents who sticks his kid's art in a folder to be stashed away and never seen again. This father from Peterborough in Ontario, Canada, will have lasting memories of his son Kai's drawings because he has tattooed them onto his arms. It started with a daisy that Kai drew when he was a wee tot, and each year since then, Anderson has added another drawing. Kai has even participated a little bit in the actual tattooing process in a couple of small sections. Anderson reports that the reaction from others to the unusual way of displaying his child's art is usually quite positive.

Big wave: Working as a journalist and covering stories about the environment can be dangerous. That is what French news reporter Fanny Agostini discovered when she was trying to do a live story about the spring tide being quite high in Saint-Malo in Brittany, France. She was overtaken by a huge wave that came rolling onto the street from the sea, and, of course, the whole thing was caught on camera. The video shows Agostini's feet being swept out from under her. Fortunately, she's nimble and managed to get back on her feet without hurting anything except, perhaps, her pride.

Long walk: Commuting to and from work usually means a short car ride or a trip on the city bus. But for James Robertson of Detroit, Michigan (US), the commute is a 10-mile (16-kilometer) walk each way. Robertson started walking to his factory job over 10 years ago when his car broke down and he's never missed a day of work. When Robertson's story got out, a college student named Evan Leedy organized an online campaign for a new car and over $350,000 was raised. The money is being properly managed by professionals. In the meantime, Robertson has no plans to quit his job, but he only walks to work now when he feels like it!

Did You Know...

Lovely lip: That vertical groove located above the middle of the upper lip and below the nose is known as the philtrum. The word has Greek origins and its meaning is "to love, to kiss."

Food bumps: The humps on camels are used to store fat tissue. When a camel is trekking across the desert and can't get access to food, it uses the fat in its hump for energy.

Pearly whites: The hardest substance found in the human body is teeth. The white, outer part of the tooth is the enamel, which is made up of calcium phosphate. Adults have 32 teeth, not including the wisdom teeth.

Bye-bye banana: Gros Michel bananas used to be widely available. However, in the 1950s, Gros Michel plantations in South America and Africa were wiped out by Panama disease. This type of banana is still produced in Southeast Asia.

Rose hip uses: Roses aren't just pretty flowers. They are shrubs that produce a fruit called a rose hip. In some species of roses, the rose hip has lots of vitamin C, so it is used in certain edible items, such as tea and jam.

Not a pig: Lots of children like to have guinea pigs as pets. When the guinea pig is hungry, it might squeal like a pig. However, guinea pigs aren't pigs, they are rodents.

On the Lighter Side

"Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old by deserting their ideals." - Samuel Ullman

Why can't bananas grow any longer?
Because they're long enough already.

Knock knock. Who's there? Spell. Spell who? W-H-O.

If you can stay calm while all around you is chaos, then you probably haven't understood the seriousness of the situation.

Scientists recently located the gene for military aptitude. They would have found it earlier, but it was camouflaged.
