Everybody's Talking!

Eat and read: A café in the Zona Rosa district of Mexico City is not just a place to go for a meal. It is also a great location to read a book or to enjoy some greenery. Called Cafebrería el Péndulo, the café's two levels offer a plethora of plants, as well as many high shelves and piles of books. Also available are CDs and DVDs for music and movie-loving patrons. On the main floor, guests can dine at tables, while the second floor contains couches for reading and snacking. The café/bookstore is named after a giant pendulum that hangs from the ceiling. Visitors can give it a push as they come and go.

Honest woman: A bride-to-be in Birmingham, England, chose ethics over her fiancé when she found out about a robbery he had committed. The thief, Steven Reid, along with an accomplice, had broken into an elderly woman's home, stealing several pieces of jewelry in the process. The loot included a ring that Reid gave his girlfriend when he asked her to marry him. Unfortunately for Reid, his girlfriend was honest. She had seen media reports of the crime, including pictures of the ring, and turned him in. The thief ended up with jail time.

White sand: In Australia, Whitehaven Beach is located on Whitsunday Island in the Coral Sea, off the coast of Queensland. Like its name, this beach is very white. That's because the sand is made of almost pure silica, which is whiter and of finer texture than the sand found on other beaches. When walking on this seven-kilometer (4.3-mile) stretch of shoreline in bare feet, the sand is said to feel like velvet. And beachgoers don't have to worry about the sand being too hot; silica does not retain heat as well as other beach sands. To keep the beach pristine, dogs and cigarettes are not allowed.

Brothers by birth: Playing together as children and growing up to be best friends for life, two men in Hawaii (US) were amazed to find out, after knowing each other for more than 60 years, that they are biological brothers. The two are Alan Robinson, who was adopted, and Walter Macfarlane, who was raised by his mother but didn't know his father. Unbeknownst to each other, the brothers started searching for answers to their ancestry, and they coincidentally used the same specialized website. Turns out they have the same biological mother. Both were overwhelmed, but happy to announce the news to family and friends.

Did You Know...

Olive origins: The scientific name for olive trees is Olea europaea. These trees can live for hundreds of years. The olive fruit is not eaten right off the tree, as it is too bitter. Olives are eaten after being cured.

Accidental toy: The Slinky toy was invented by Richard James in 1943. A naval engineer, James was trying to use springs to find a way to keep fragile devices steady during use on ships. When he accidentally knocked over a spring, he saw its potential as a toy.

Painting in blue: When Spanish artist Pablo Picasso (1881-1973) was in his early twenties, he went through his "Blue Period" of painting. During this time, he used various shades of blue as the dominant color in his work.

Sled dog: The Chinook dog breed originated in the state of New Hampshire (US) in the early 1900s. A cross between a farm dog and a husky, Chinooks are gentle and intelligent, and were originally bred to pull sleds.

Standing tall: The highest mountain in the Western Hemisphere is Cerro Aconcagua, or "Rock Sentinel." Part of the Andes Mountain Range in the Province of Mendoza (Argentina), Aconcagua stands approximately 6,960 meters (22,835 feet) above sea level.

On the Lighter Side

Middle age is when the narrow waist and the broad mind begin to change places.

Judge: "I'll have order in this court! Order in this court!"
Plaintiff: "I'll have a hamburger with onions."

How do you milk an ant? First you get a very low stool....

His trouble is too much bone in the head and not enough in the back.

Hard: an easy word that means difficult.
